Living Well Community Resource Guide

Healthy body, healthy relationships, healthy communities. Created Together.

About Providence Institute for a Healthier Community

The Providence Institute for a Healthier Community was founded in 2014 and is a partnership between Providence, the Snohomish County Health Leadership Coalition, business, government, non-profits, and the people of Snohomish county.

Its aim is to find the ways and facilitate the behavior for all of us in the community to improve our health, honoring the mind, body, and spirit. The benefit to the individual will be to live a longer, healthier, happier life. The benefit to the community will be to become the healthiest community in the country with the lowest healthcare costs, so we can invest more of our resources in what matters. Assisting our community in identifying and supporting health and healing assets for ALL in our community

Introduction

The Living Well Resource Guide is designed to assist in linking individuals and providers to assets in our community that can support wellbeing and enhance the quality of life for individuals, families, and communities in Snohomish County.

Providence Institute for a Healthier Community recognizes that when it comes to protecting, promoting and enhancing quality of life - taking good care today in our community is taking better care of all those we may serve tomorrow.

It is clear that the daily conditions, environments and habits that individuals - our patients, our community - experience and develop today have the greatest impacts on health status and quality of life both now and throughout each stage life. Basically, most of health happens (or doesn't happen) outside of healthcare. The wellbeing areas of social connection, basic security, safety and opportunities for purpose and meaning greatly affect physical health and are the most important underlying drivers of health outcomes. These needs frequently exceed the health system's direct role in health care delivery - but are critical in supporting patient care, keeping health care cost down and connecting to a healthier community

This edition of the Community Resource Guide is accessible countywide and all categories are available to print. We welcome private and professional members of our community to utilize this resource.

Coming soon Phase II (anticipated fall 2016) - an online open sourced searchable clearinghouse, in partnership with North Sound 211.

How to use the guide

Categories and subcategories are identified and color-coded under a larger theme according to wellbeing interest or need. Many resources cross over multiple categories.

Resources/agencies offering a web site can be accessed directly by clicking the available website link listed under the noted resource.

All users are invited to print off as many pages of this guide as needed or you may save the entire guide in its PDF format.

Please see the Table of Contents to help identify the location of needed resources.

Inclusion of any links is not meant as an endorsement by PIHC of any specific event, product, or service. Content accessed from this section is the property of the organization whose website it is posted on - PIHC does not own or control those offerings.

A Collaborative Clearinghouse: This guide will remain a work in progress; not all categories may be complete. We will continue to source this guide with available resources and hope you will join in - with additions and/or revisions to help create a robust and accurate Living Well Resource Guide for our community, together.

Please contact Jessica Burt at Jessica.burt@providence.org for edits or additions

Health & Services

Well-Being: Health is multi-dimensional. A spirit of learning, and growing in each of these well-being dimensions is important if we are to feel fulfilled and whole as individuals and communities. Understanding the various aspects of well-being and how they fit together to create our lives is a key tool in discovering who we are and why we feel the way that we do.

Well-being Dimensions informed by Snohomish County Health and Well-Being Monitor

Having enough, being enough and freedom from worry. We need enough money for food, rent or mortgage, health care, medical bills and basic expenses of daily living. Research shows that 'extras' don't really contribute to our well-being- unless it is for fun activities and friends, or expenses that match our values and not necessarily more and bigger things.

SECURITY/SAFETY

Paralyzing fear or anxiety that we don't have or are not enough threatens our sense of safety. This affects our ability to be resilient - to bounce back physically, mentally, and emotionally during experiences of mild or extreme stress.

Be a self-care master. One of the most important things you can do is to make wise decisions that keep you safe and healthy—helping you to maintain an independent, productive, and social life. A physically healthy person strives to maintain their body in times of sickness and good health. Diet, exercise, sleep and stress have a profound effect on disease conditions and well-being. Physical health also includes; hygiene routines, use of tobacco, alcohol and other drugs, the use of personal protective gear, following safety guidelines, not taking unnecessary risks, and the wise use of healthcare resources— including regular checkups and recommended screenings.

PHYSICAL

Recognizing your own and others emotions and responding appropriately makes a difference.

MENTAL/EMOTIONALS
& SPIRIT

It is the ability to cultivate positive thoughts, practice self-compassion, to learn to express (in a healthy way) your full range of emotions and consciously choose your responses; including, engaging in support systems to help cope. A strong sense of spirituality provides important benefits to health. It is linked with a sense of meaning and purpose which helps guide life decisions, influences behavior, shapes goals, offers a sense of direction, and provides comfort during life's challenges.

Healthy relationships are vital to health. Strong family ties, friendships, and partnerships can increase our sense of security, self-esteem, belonging and provide a buffer against stress, anxiety, and depression. Our larger social and community networks also provide a sense of connection where people can share their interests and be advocates in their community, which also supports resilience.

RELATIONSHIPS/SOCIAL

Using available resources to develop and create opportunities

LEARNING/

that contribute to your unique gifts, skills, and talents— contributes to meaning and purpose and helps you remain active and involved throughout life. Including, appreciation and acceptance of the process of change, growth and learning while seeking to improve. A career which is consistent with your personal values, interests, beliefs and balances both work and play contributes greatly to all the dimensions of well-being.

Being in nature not only makes you feel better emotionally,

NATURAL

it contributes to your physical wellbeing—it soothes, restores and connects. People who live near parks and natural areas are more physically active live longer and these open spaces draw people together and can enhance social connections. Wellbeing also relies our ability to be stewards of our natural environment—aware of the earth's natural resources and their respective limits, accountable to environmental needs, both now and in the future.
